

Job Of The Week

10th October

CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGIST

Salary

The salary of a Clinical Psychologist can range from £32,305 to £45,848

Typical Hours

37 - 39 hours a week. You could work evenings and weekends

Entry Requirements

You'll usually need:

- 3 A-Levels or equivalent
- a 3-year degree in psychology accredited by The British Psychological Society (BPS)
- a 3-year postgraduate doctorate in clinical psychology

You could do a clinical associate in psychology integrated degree apprenticeship.

As clinical associate in psychology you would work under the supervision of a registered clinical psychologist. For this, you'll usually need a degree in a relevant subject for a degree apprenticeship

What You'll do

In this job, you'll:

- assess clients' needs through interviews, tests and observations
- decide on the most appropriate treatments, like therapy or counselling
- plan treatment programmes
- work with clients in groups or individually
- go to case conferences
- carry out research
- work closely with other professionals like doctors
- produce legal reports and act as an expert witness in court

You could work in an NHS or private hospital, at a client's home, at a university or at a health centre

Career Path & Progression

You could work with particular groups like children, young offenders or people with addictions.

With further training, you could specialise in clinical neuropsychology, or move into research or university teaching.

You might also work as a freelance consultant, advising other professionals and clients, or set up your own psychology practice
